

Report of the Banking Awareness Program organized by the Department of Economics, Yeshwant Mahavidyalaya, Seloo on 7th October 2023.

The event, organized with the intent to promote financial literacy and awareness among the students and residents of Seloo village, was a resounding success. The venue was adorned with banners and informative displays, reflecting the theme of the program.

The highlight of the program was the enlightening speech delivered by Prof. Mahesh Kombe, Assistant Professor in the Department of Economics. His insightful discourse shed light on various aspects of banking, emphasizing the importance of financial planning, the significance of savings, and the role of banking institutions in fostering economic growth.

Dr. Sandip Kale, the Principal of Yeshwant Mahavidyalaya, graced the occasion by presiding over the program. His presence added an aura of authority and underscored the importance of the initiative for the educational institution and the community at large.

Additionally, the presence of Dr. Suwarna Daigavhane, Assistant Professor in the Department of Home Economics, further enriched the program. Her active participation and support demonstrated the interdisciplinary nature of the initiative, highlighting the interconnectedness of economics and home economics in fostering financial well-being.

The attendees, comprising students and residents of Seloo village, actively engaged with the presentations and discussions, demonstrating a keen interest in understanding the fundamentals of banking and financial management. Interactive sessions, question-answer rounds, and informative materials were provided to ensure an immersive and engaging learning experience.

Overall, the Banking Awareness Program served as an instrumental platform for fostering financial literacy and promoting a culture of informed financial decision-making among the students and community members of Seloo village. The event's success echoed the commitment of Yeshwant Mahavidyalaya to community development and educational empowerment, marking a significant step towards creating a financially aware and empowered society.
